'The Mobile sewing Company' workshop

Part of the Arts Fest this year in Singapore was an organized workshop last evening conducted by the ladies of 'the mobile sewing company' which I was so looking forward to attend. Karin and Kirsten are inspiring people and with a friend accompanying me for that session, I truly had an enjoyable time along with the other workshop attendees.

I got the chance to ride the bicycle to power up the sewing machine that Karin was using to help alter my already very tired-looking grey cardigan.

Using materials (I used a diamond crochet doily, fabric and white trim.) provided, my cardi got a new look!

My red blouse had an embarrassing small hole on one sleeve. I snipped off both sleeves and with a bit of white lace provided, I sew it on round the front collar, at home today.
